UPDATE STATE ROUTE 330 WILL REOPEN AROUND 3 PM TODAY STATE ROUTE 330 FINAL WORK

San Bernardino County – Caltrans is close to completing the State Route 330 (SR-330) slope rehabilitation project. Some final work is required on the roadbed above the slope at the upper limits of the project. Therefore, a nighttime closure will be necessary. Caltrans made the decision to delay this work until after the Thanksgiving holiday to allow motorists full access to SR-330.

SR-330 will reopen around 3:00 p.m. today, November 29, to one-way traffic control (with pilot car). Some complications arose with the drying process of the backfill for the roadbed. The route will remain under pilot car escort until Friday morning, December 1. This will allow the contractor to keep the road open (to one lane) for the public, while completing the drain replacement. Once the drain repairs are made the road will reopen to two lanes.

SR-330 will then remain open under flagging until the completion of the project, which is expected for December 7, 2006.

When you come to a highway work zone, watch out for workers. Drivers cutting in or suddenly changing lanes at the last minute may cause rear-end collisions, which are the most common type of crash in work zones.
